

The Rural Community Transport Partnerships are a group of charitable organisations that provide a range of services across Northern Ireland to individuals and groups affected by a lack of access to transport and rural isolation, on a not for profit basis. Community transport services are provided to those living in rural areas with the specific aim of reducing social exclusion and isolation and improving the independence and quality of life for members.

Specifically the partnerships benefit the rural population by improving access to essential services such as health care, education, employment and recreation. Working collaboratively with other agencies and community organisations the partnerships improve local rural communities by providing groups with transport and training. A significant pool of volunteers has been developed to compliment and add value to the partnerships range of services.

The Rural Community Transport Partnerships are driving positive change through the promotion and provision of community led accessible and affordable transport services.
